

HEAD OF THE PLANTERS HALL HERD

ORANGE KING 3242-21534

Orange King 3042-215314 is the 2,500 pound Orange Blossom Polled Durham bull at the head of the Planters Hall Herd of Polled Durham and Shorthorn Cattle owned by W. R. Moorman & Son, Glendale, Ky.

This bull is one of the best of this breed of cattle having won the Polled Durham Championship at Iowa State Fair in 1905 and at Kentucky State Fair in both 1907 and 1908. He sired the junior champion bull at heifer at Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Iowa State Fair in 1906 and junior champion bull calf at Kentucky and Tennessee State Fairs in 1907-08, besides numerous other winners.

STILT WALKING.

In Some Parts of France It is an Absolute Necessity.

In some parts of the world, particularly in the low districts of France, stilt walking is a necessity. In Gascony there are great level plains covered with stunted bushes of dry heath. These waste lands have a soil that is so permeable, so soft and yielding, that the slightest fall of rain makes them practically impassable by ordinary methods of pedestrianism. But these wastes must be traversed at all seasons by the poor people of Gascony, and necessity has accordingly made the Gascons a stilt walking people, men, women and children may be seen at all seasons of the year, wading through the waste lands, carrying baskets, bundles and the like. The stilts used are about five feet long and often longer.

The shepherds of Landes all go on stilts. The shepherd is provided with a stout staff that answers for many purposes. At the proper place in the staff is a flap, which makes a comfortable seat when turned down. On this the shepherd quietly sits and watches his flock, and while he sits up there he knits or spins with a distaff thrust in his girdle.

The Landes stilt walker can do marvelous things with these five foot extensions. He can run with a speed that will tax a horse, pick up a pebble or pluck a flower as the cowhide reaches to the earth from his pony, and he can drop to the ground level and regain the perpendicular as quickly as a cat can turn a handspring.—Chicago News.

Never can tell when you'll mash a finger or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil Instantly relieves the pain—quickly cures the wound.

A Bitter Retort.
"Do you think," he asked, "that you could learn to love me?"
"I don't know," she answered. "I might, but if I were a man I'd hate to think that I was an acquired taste."—Chicago Record-Herald.

GOOD ROADS IN SWEDEN.

Every Landowner Must Keep His Section of Highways Improved.

O. Zerklin of Clarks Springs, Mo., who is especially interested in the Kansas City Star's light for good roads, says: "Perhaps it would be of interest to know how the roads in Sweden are maintained. There are three classes of roads there—highways, village roads and private roads. The highways run between county seats, and the grades are limited to 2½ per cent. The village roads cannot be in excess of a 4 per cent grade. The cost of building is divided among the landowners according to acreage, whether it is government land or is owned by private citizens, except where one owner has an extremely costly road to build along his land. In that case he gets due allowance in distance for the cost of construction. No village road can be opened until it is built to the proper grade.

"As to maintenance, every landowner must keep his section of the road properly improved. If he does not a government inspector orders him to improve it at once. And if the landowner fails to pay the cost the government takes a sufficient amount of his personal property and sells it to satisfy the judgment.

"Every man must maintain his own roads in that country under government supervision. One provision of the government law in Sweden says that the driver is not allowed to ride up the hills on a loaded wagon if it is necessary to use a whip on his horse."

Failure of a College Education.
"Well," observed old man Potts, "I've spent a heap of money on my boy Bill's education, more'n $300, just to see him through Yale, and I ain't through yet. The king and M. Bonnier, the botanist, met as strangers while out in search of flowers near Stockholm. They were soon the best of friends, and Bonnier suggested lunch at his inn.

"Come home with me instead," said the other.
"When the way led to the palace gates Bonnier hesitated.
"I'm sorry," said his companion, "but I happen to be the king of this country, and this is the only place where I can entertain my friends."

"I'm sure I don't know, father."
"He begged my pardon!"—Harper's Weekly.

"Had you any indignation for years. No appetite and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

Had to Bow to Custom.
The late King Oscar of Sweden was the least conventional of monarchs, but he had to courtesy to custom on certain occasions. The king and M. Bonnier, the botanist, met as strangers while out in search of flowers near Stockholm. They were soon the best of friends, and Bonnier suggested lunch at his inn.

"Come home with me instead," said the other.
"When the way led to the palace gates Bonnier hesitated.
"I'm sorry," said his companion, "but I happen to be the king of this country, and this is the only place where I can entertain my friends."

Scottish Caution.

Certainly the cautious Scot spirit pervaded the opinions of the Scottish architect who was called upon to erect a building in England upon the long lease system, so common with English proprietors, but quite new to our friend. When he found the proposal was to build upon the tenure of 999 years he quietly suggested: "Could ye no mink it a thousand? Nine hundred and ninety-nine years 'll be slipperin' awa'."

But of all the cautious and careful answers we ever heard of was one given by a carpenter to an old lady in Glasgow, for whom he was working, and the anecdote is well authenticated. She had offered him a dram and asked him whether he would have it or wait till his work was done. "Indeed, m'ne," he said, "there's been sic a power of studden deaths lately that I'll just tak' it now."—"Reminiscences of Dean Madden."

Spanish Taste in English.
The Spaniards sold a book entitled "Farming in the Old Valley."

"Will you please tell me," said a customer, "what is the book about?"
"It is a Spanish attempt to write in English, and I think it will sell him."

"It sounds like a very unpromising subject for a student in English to tackle," a friend remarked.

"It would be uninteresting to anybody but a Spanish student," said the Spaniard, "but the Spaniards run to farming here. When training beginners in English of any other nationality something seriously in the way of fiction or travel usually is recommended. But not to the Spaniards. Nine times out of ten it is a work on agriculture that he will make the best progress in."—New York Press.

The Whole World For Good Roads.
The motor car naturally suggested the good road, and all the world has taken up the building of good roads in response to the suggestion. It is a new idea with us in California, but it is growing like the weeds by the roadside. The war has given days. The single county of Los Angeles is getting busy to spend $3,500,000 in the construction of 300 miles of roads inside of its own limits. And we hope, will not lag behind in response to this twentieth century sentiment. The governor asks for an appropriation of $18,000,000 to build two trunk lines the whole length of the state, in all something like 1,000 miles.—Los Angeles Times.

Good Roads in France.
In France the highways are the chief competitors of the railroads. The far-reaching and splendidly maintained road system has definitely favored the small landed proprietors, and in their prosperity and their ensuing distribution of wealth lies the key to the secret of the wonderful financial vitality and prosperity of the French nation. The road system of France has been of far greater value to the country as the means of raising the value of lands and of putting the small peasant proprietors in easy communication with their markets than have the railroads.

WRECKED VESSELS.

Difficulties That Beset the Work of the Salvagers.

What it means to salvage a wreck is something that few outside of practical seamen can properly appreciate. The wreck is a ponderous, unyielding mountain of steel and oak, weighing between 3,000 and 12,000 tons, often dangerous for any vessel to approach, and this must be lifted bodily and floated from the decks of pitching, unstable scows and barges. The wreck may be submerged beneath fifteen or thirty feet of water and no store in that divers must go down and effect temporary repairs before it can be raised. It may be a wreck so shattered that it is not worth raising, so that the wrecker's work consists merely in blowing up the hulk and removing it as a menace to navigation. Or the vessel may be fairly intact, but sunk too deep to make attempt at raising advisable, the wrecker's work consisting in salvaging valuable cargo. Often the wreck is one not submerged at all. A ship may have run on to a reef, where it lies, nose on a crag and stern afloat, rising and falling on the ocean swell, rounding, pounding and pinning until the very ocean bottom dreads and she is gradually broken to pieces. Or, again, the wreck may be that of a steamer which has pulled its nose shoreward in a fog, finding a beach, plowing a furrow through the yielding sand and never coming to a halt until it is stuck fast all but high and dry, a helpless victim to the next storm that comes screeching up the coast to pile breakers against her and crowd her even higher upon the beach.—Applenton's.

The Old Home Calls.

Come back to me, little dancing feet that roam the wide world o'er,
I long for the illt of your flying steps in my silent rooms once more.
Come back to me, little voices gay with laughter and with song,
Come back, little hearts beating high with hopes, I have missed and mourned you long.

My roses bloom in my garden walks all sweet and wet with the dew,
My lights shine down on the long hill road the waning twilight through;
The swallows flutter about my eaves as in the years of old,
And close about me their steadfast arms the lapping pine trees fold.

But I am weary for you at morn and eve, O children of my love,
Come back to me from your pilgrim ways, from the seas and plains ye rove,
Come over the meadow and up the lane to my door set open wide,
And sit ye down where the red light shines from my welcoming fireside.

I keep for you all your childhood dreams, your gladness and delight,
The joy of days in the sun and rain, the sleep of care-free nights,
All the sweet faiths ye have lost and sought again shall be your own;
Hearings, come to my empty heart, I am old and still and alone!

—L. M. Montgomery, in the Youth's Companion.

MAINTAINING STONE ROADS.

Protective Value of Wood Meal Mixed With Oil and Tar.

One who is interested in road building and thinks he knows how to maintain a macadamized road in a thoroughly effective and cheap way says: "If my observations are correct the destruction of a road starts in the following manner: Small stones or pebbles are loosened by the wheels of vehicles and scattered over the road, leaving little holes therein. Now, as long as the wheels had from these these little stones were ground or crushed by those wheels, and the holes in the road were filled again with their dust, the rubs playing perhaps a good part in packing and filling the material.

"With the soft wheel automobile all this changed for the worse. The rapid revolution of the broad wheels and the action caused by them and by the low bodies of the machines loose the little stones under the wheels, and, as there are, hardly any wheels left to grind and crush the loose pebbles the small holes soon come plentiful and before long they grow into large ones and runs.

"To sprinkle the roads with lignite is quite ineffective to prevent spalling. It must be something that has a body that will hold the particles of the road all will hold and protect the surface. It must be solid enough to be strewn on the road. There are probably many ways of producing such a road protector, and many ingredients might be used for it, but one of the best, I think, would be wood meal—that is, ground sawdust, ground hay or straw, ground cornstarch or any such article which is cheap and plentiful and which can easily be ground to meal and which will float and not clog up the sewer.

it used in the city. This meal should be soaked in oil or mixed with oil or with a mixture of oil and tar or any other suitable binder, so that it will not only protect and keep intact the road, but also lay the dust. If used on asphalt it would give a good footing for horses, which is sorely needed."

BETTER SCHOOLS IN BRECKENRIDGE

The Board of Education Has Made Arrangements to Have Better Paid Teachers And Taken Steps For Other Improvements.

ONE DISTRICT ABOLISHED.

After much work with a troublesome proposition, the Board of Education for the county, have agreed upon holding every school possible to hold for the coming year, thus giving the most convenient arrangement to our people and putting before them the opportunity to have better schools and better paid teachers than ever before.

Only one white district had to be abolished. We could find no way to hold Brady's with its twenty-one pupils. The pupils in this district, together with McGee's and Bethel are enough to make two paper schools for the year, schools being taught at McGee's and Bethel. The patrons in the old Brady territory may select the school they prefer to patronize this year and report their choice to the Superintendent before July 1st, and, without cost to themselves, they may patronize the school of their selection for the year, whether it be McGee's, Norton's or any other that adjoins them.

The Board set the salaries of teachers at Kirk and at Custer at $60 per month; Garfield, Westview and Germantown will pay $50 each.

Fourteen schools, all pauper and worse on account of their small census—for they all fall below 40 and consequently cannot hold on by themselves, but must be reported with a larger school near them, will each pay $25.00 per month. They are: Tauls, Robbins' Tuckers, Lodiburg, Argabrights, Jarrets, Poplar Grove, Bethel, Pleasant Valley, High Plains, Rhodes, Little Union, Jackson and Overton's.

These districts, though pauper in size, may, by offering to board their teachers, supplement the salaries given by the Board, secure most any teacher they wish. Instead of abolishing these districts, they are held at a better salary than ever before, and with the possibility of having superior schools this coming school year.

For the benefit of patrons, trustees and teachers, we publish all the information now obtainable concerning the schools and their probable pay for the year. All this, of course, is based upon the presumption that the present school law will be declared constitutional. There is no doubt about the per capita being as good as it was last year. Hence those interested can make their estimates of pay from the number of pupils for which payment will be made.

Colored Schools

These are not quite arranged, but will be given next week.

Cleared $15.

The entertainment given Friday night by Miss Bettie Lewis, of Louisville, was most pleasant and successful. Miss Lewis completely charmed the Cloverport people. She attracted a large audience for the Presbyterian church and the clearings amounted to $15.

GARFIELD.

A. A. Richardson and son, Ackley were called to Buck Grove church last Saturday on account of the death of his uncle, James Gazer Shacklett, who died at his home in Garrett. Mr. Shacklett was 78 years old. In his young days he drove the stage from Muldraugh to Harlinsburg.

Mrs. Aaron Norton, Mrs. Richardson's mother, who has been in California for the last three years has returned home. She is enjoying splendid health.

Rev. Mather, Jas. Durham, of Harlinsburg, Miss Cova Matthews and Miss Oma Compton were guests of Mrs. A. A. Richardson to dinner Saturday.

Misses Lizzie Bandy, Ida Ater, Mary Lewis Adkinson, A. J. Ater and C. Gibson, of Leitchburg, were over Saturday attending the Sunday School Convention.

The District Sunday School Convention was well attended. A splendid program was rendered and a fine dinner was served on the grounds. The Garfield people are noted for their fine dinners and splendid hospitality.

The farmers in the Garfield neighborhood took advantage of the rain and set out a big portion of their tobacco crop.

WANTED NO LAWYER.

It Was a Simple Matter to Satisfy the Accused.
 "Joe Blunk to the bar," ordered the judge in a rural Alabama court.
 A big, lunking fellow ambled up to be arraigned for murder.
 "Jed," began the judge, "you are charged with the gravest crime known to the law, that of taking the life of a fellow man. One of the forms of punishment for murder is death. Have you made any arrangements for your defense in this case, Jed?"
 "No, suh, judge. I ain' done nuthin'."
 "Have you a lawyer, Jed?"
 "No, suh, judge. I ain' got no lawyer. I ain' got nuthin', judge."
 "Well, Jed," said the judge, showing a little impatience, "have you talked to anybody about this case?"
 "I talked to de sheriff some dat night when he come after me, judge, but you knows dat didn't do no good."
 "For your information, Jed, I will state that it is within the province of this court to appoint counsel to any defendant who has none. I am now ready to appoint you a lawyer. Do you want one?"
 "No, judge. I don't want nuthin'," replied Jed rather defiantly.
 "See here," snapped the judge, "I won't have any more of this foolishness. You say you don't want any lawyer. Well, then, what do you intend to do about this case?"
 "Well, I tells you, judge, I ain' tendin' to do nuthin'. Ef it's 'ee' de same to you, judge, as far as I'm concerned I's willin' to let de whole matter drop right here.—Everybody's."

Cunningham, Sam Tate, Eli Miller, Cy Miller and Wm. Lyons. Addresses eloquent, patriotic and tenderly mindful of the dead were made by Rev. J. H. Lennon and Dr. Arthur Mather.
 J. H. Lennon recently returned from Lexington where he went as a delegate to the great Council of Kentucky Red Men. Mr. Lennon has the distinction of being the oldest Red Man in the state, he being six years older than the oldest man who has hitherto claimed to be the oldest.
HOW AUTHORS WRITE.
 Pope Thought Best When in Bed.—Victor Hugo wrote Standing.
 Alexander Pope, who was the literary pontiff of his time, thought best when in bed. Whenever a thought came to him he would jot it down on a scrap of paper. His servant often found bedclothes and floor covered with white bits containing aphorisms which have now become innumerable quotations.
 Victor Hugo wrote "Les Miserables" standing up, an attitude which Hawthorne also assumed when he wrote many of his romances.
 One leg thrown over the arm of his secretary's chair was Napoleon's favorite position while dictating to Bourrienne, a position which he varied now and then by patting that scribe on the head or pulling his ears.
 Sir Walter Scott could write reclining on a lounge dictate to two amanuenses, who frequently had to stop writing, so funny the dictated passages seemed to them.
 Balzac, in a monk's robe, frequently wrote from midnight till noon, taking drafts of strong coffee when drowsiness attacked him and then shortening his life by his own hands.
 William Morris made one of his famous translations from the Greek while riding on the steam cars.
 Whitman and Horace Traubel, original in all things, were most original in the position they took while thinking. They were wont, so Mr. Traubel says, to climb upon a pile of lumber and lie down upon their backs. In that way each found out what the other's best thoughts were.—Boston Globe.
Bills For Better Roads.
 In the Iowa legislature two bills have been introduced in the interests of better roads. One provides for the doubling of the county road tax levy, for the development of the most important roads which radiate from the principal market town in each county. The other bill places a tax of $5 on all automobiles under thirty horsepower and $10 on thirty horsepower and over, the proceeds to go into the state good roads fund.
Good Road's Great Value.
 A good road is a convenience and a necessity. It helps both the buyer and the seller of farm produce. It is invaluable to farmer and merchant alike.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle with water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust settles to the bottom, creating a stringy or milky appearance. This indicates a healthy condition of the kidneys. If the water remains clear, it is a sign of kidney trouble. The kidneys are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Kidney, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and swelling pain in passing it, or had effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up often through the night, and to get up many times during the day. The mild and pleasant effect of Swamp-Kidney is soon realized. It is the highest because of its remarkable healing power. If you need a medicine you should have Swamp-Kidney. It is sold by druggists at fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmor & Co., Birmingham, N. Y. Mention this paper in writing. The name, Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Kidney and the address, Birmingham, N. Y., on every bottle.

"I will take the liberty of adding that the senator accused is none other than the junior senator from Mississippi."

Langdon's eyes blazed. He stood swiftly into the aisle.

"Mr. President," he cried passionately, "I know this is not the time or place for a discussion like this, but I ask that the senatorial courtesy permit me to ask"—then he concluded strongly before he could be stopped—that is the evidence in support of this preposterous charge."

"This is all out of order," said the presiding officer after a pause, "in view of the circumstances I will entertain a motion to suspend the rules."

On the motion passing, Horton replied to Langdon.

"Your name is signed to a contract with J. D. Teffer, mayor of Gulf City, Miss., relating to land in the Gulf City Land company, and—"

"A lie, a lie!" screamed Langdon.

"That ought," went on Horton coolly, "to say in Washington. He has the contract and will swear to conversations with you and your secretary. His testimony will be corroborated by no less a personage than Congressman Norton of your own district, who says you asked him to conduct part of the discussion."

"And I left him," cried Horton, "that it is known to more than one member of this honorable body that you had drawn up a minority report in favor of the Gulf City land company, and that the day after your plan to take the naval base away from Altona."

Langdon sank into his chair, bewildered, even stunned. "There was a conspiracy against him, but he would prove it," the ground seemed rumbling from under him—no even a straw to grasp. Then the old fighting blood that carried him along in those days was roused at the valves of his veins. He leaped to his feet.

A sound as of a scuffle—a body falling heavily—drove all eyes from Langdon to the rear of the main aisle. An assistant sergeant at arms was lying face downward on the carpet. Another was vainly trying to hold back Dr. Haines, who, tearing himself free, rushed down to his chief wailing a sheet of paper in the senator's eyes.

"Read that," gasped the secretary breathlessly, and he hurried away up a side passage way and out the stairs leading to the press gallery.

Langdon spread the paper before him with difficulty with his trembling hands. Slowly his whitening brain gave him the ability to read. Slowly what appeared to him as a jumbled notation resolved into orderly lines and words.

"I therefore offer this resolution providing for the appointment of an investigating committee to look into these charges."

Langdon was intensely excited over this new development. "Some one has learned something about the Peabody," he muttered. He feared that this new complication might in some way affect the fate of the naval base. He rose slowly in his seat, while the senate hummed with the murmur of suppressed voices.

"I ask for more definite information," he began when recognized and after the president of the senate had pounded with the gavel to restore quiet, "so that this house can consider this important matter more intelligently."

Senator Horton rose. He said:

"I have been ordered to two of his colleagues."

"Report of the committee on naval affairs," droned the clerk mechanically. "House bill No. 110 is amended to read as follows:—And his voice sank to an unintelligible mumble, for every senator present he well knew was aware that the amendment named Altona as the naval base site."

Senator Langdon rose in his seat. "Mr. President," he called.

"Chair recognize the gentleman from Mississippi," said the presiding officer as he leaned back to speak to Senator Wilson of Kansas, who had approached to the side of the rostrum.

The Langdon speech on "The New South and the South of the Future" proved more than a document suited only to a reverent burial in the Congressional Record. Although wearied at the start owing to the exciting happenings of the day, the Mississippi's enthusiasm for his cause gave him strength and stimulation as he progressed. His voice rose majestically as he came to the conclusion that he wished to accede, and even those in the uppermost rows in the galleries could hear his every word.

At the close of his formal speech he began on his statement of the action of the naval affairs committee in buying control of Altona land to foil attempts to rob the government of it. As he had predicted, the senate did "sit up." The senate did agree that a new kind of politics had arrived.

During this latter part of the speech many curious glances were directed at Peabody and Stevens, who sat in the same tier of seats, in the middle of the chamber, only an aisle separating them. Through this choice of seats they could confer without leaving their places.

Various snatches of conversation of these two men in their daily contact it difficult to believe their ears—but was not of Langdon at this moment narrating the amazing transaction on the floor of the senate? Would the statue on the pedestal step? Would the sphinx of the desert speak the story of the lost continent? Would honor take the place of expediency in the affairs of state? What might not happen, thought the senate machine, now that Peabody and Stevens had taken to their bosoms what they termed the purple pup of political purity?

Neither did the full portent of the situation escape the attention of the reporters' gallery. Dick Cullen observed to Hansel of the Record:

"Virtue's getting so black around here it's a menace to navigation."

"Blocking the traffic, eh?" queried Hansel, and both laughed.

"Hello! What's this?" exclaimed Cullen a few minutes later. "Horton has been recognized, when the program of an adjournment when the naval base bill was over with."

Langdon's speech had proved the hit, the sensation of the session. After he concluded, amid rostrum applause, in which senators joined, as well as occupants of the galleries, Senator Horton of Montana rose and caught the presiding officer's eye.

"I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution."

Hearing no objection he continued in a manner that instantly attracted attention:

"It is my unpleasant duty"—Peabody and Stevens exchanged glances, as if to say a matter before this body that to me, as a member of this honorable body, is not only distasteful, but deeply to be regretted.

"There has arisen ground to suspect a member of this body of having endeavored to make money at the government's expense out of land which he is alleged to have desired his own committee to choose as the naval base."

"I therefore offer this resolution providing for the appointment of an investigating committee to look into these charges."

that choked him. "I ask this house to listen to the following letter:—"

"Dear Senator Langdon—When you receive this letter I shall be well on my way to take a steamer for Cuba. I write to let you know that I think very harshly of me for I will always cherish thoughts of the friendship you have shown me."

"Peabody and Stevens have finally proved too much for me. When they got old Teifer to write to a forged contract and wanted me to force your name in the land records at Gulf City. I threw up my hands. Their game will always go on, I suppose, but you gave them a shock when you broke up their Altona graft scheme. And I'm glad you did. They cast me aside today, probably thinking they could get me again if they needed me."

"I am going on the sugar plantation of a friend, where I can make a new start and forget that I ever went to Washington."

Langdon passed deliberately. The senatorial handkerchief was wiped. Not even the rustle of a sheet of paper was heard in the reporters' gallery. The Mississippi gazed around the senate chamber. He saw Stevens and Peabody craning their necks across the aisle and talking excitedly to each other.

He stepped forward and spoke, waving the paper in the air.

"This letter is signed 'Charles Norton.'"

The old southerner gazed triumphantly at the men who had sought to destroy him. It was with difficulty that the presiding officer could restrain the burst of handclapping that arose from the galleries.

Senator Horton, however, was not satisfied with Langdon's sudden ascendency.

"How do we know that that letter is not a forgery, a trick?" he exclaimed.

"Go get Congressman Norton—if you can—and get his denial," responded Langdon.

The junior senator from Mississippi hurriedly pushed his way out of the senate chamber. His day's work was done.

Down on a broad plantation along the Peabody river an old planter, who has borne his years well, as life goes nowadays, passes his days contentedly. He delights in the company of his grandchildren as they pour the echoes of the mansion and prides himself on the achievements of their father, Randolph, who has improved the plantation to a point never reached before.

Sometimes he receives a letter from his daughter, Hope Georgia, now Mrs. Haines, telling him of her happy life, or perhaps it is a letter from Carolina, describing the good times she is having in London with the friends she is visiting.

And the old planter goes out on the broad veranda in the warm southern twilight, and he thinks of the days that were. He remembers how the Third Mississippi won the day at Crawfordsville. He thinks of the days when he fought the good fight in Washington. His thoughts turn to the memory of her who went before these many years and whom he is soon to see again, and peace descends upon the soul of the gentleman from Mississippi as the world drowns to slumber around him.

THE TOLL.

Early Kansas Terrors.

Captain Zebulon M. Pike says he killed a number of big snakes and joint snakes on his trip up the Cottonwood River while on his way to discover Pike's Peak. His journal says in his diary that while in camp on the south fork of the Cottonwood River—near where Benson now is—he met up with a "white snake" that filled itself with wind so that it was as big around as a gallow-moose, and when it gave a big puff it blew his hat off.—Eldorado Republican.

Bad Backache

Such agonies as some women suffer, every month, from backache!

Is it necessary? No. It can be prevented and relieved, where caused by female trouble, by taking a medicine with specific, curative action, on the female organs and functions, which acts by restoring the circulation, stopping the pain and building the organs and functions up to a proper state of health. Try.

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I suffered for 15 years," writes Mrs. Nellie A. Akers, of Dallas, Va., "with various female troubles. I had such backache that I drew me away, as I could not stand straight. The doctors could not help me. I felt Cardui, and now I feel like a new woman."

ROADMAKING WITH OIL

Method of Construction Valuable For Dirt and Macadam.

PRACTICALLY SELF HEALING.

Old Highways Are Not Only Dustless, Mudless and Noiseless, but They Improve With Use—Oil Makes Roads Firm, but Not Hard.

In the opinion of H. T. Shell, who has made a study of city and country roads in twenty states in the last year, more good roads will be built in Kansas during the next twelve months than in any other state in the Union. Mr. Shell investigated road conditions for the Standard Oil company. The big trust is seeking a market for its surplus of oil left after the more valuable products have been taken from it. The surplus oil is now sold chiefly for fuel.

"The company expects to build a mile of good road near the State Agricultural college at Manhattan, Kan," Mr. Shell said. "We expect to show by the experiment that an oil road, whether built with earth or crushed rock, is not only the most durable, but in the end is the most economical."

"In every state there is annually spent millions of dollars in building new roads. In few cases are any considerable sums spent on the roads to preserve them. Oil roads are not only dustless, mudless and noiseless, but they are practically self-healing—that is, they improve with use. The dirt and old roads give horses good footing, while the tires of the vehicles run off the hoof marks."

Experiments made on Kansas City boulevards and on roads in Jackson county, which were coated with oil, have been watched by men and organizations interested in good roads. The coating of oil on boulevards and roads in Jackson county was among the earlier experiments in its use. Adopted for use to prevent dust, it was found that oil is also a preservative. In his report to the board of park commissioners on the use of oil on Kansas City boulevards, W. H. Dunn, superintendent of parks, said the results were "remarkable."

The city paid an average of 77½ cents a barrel of forty-two gallons for made an exceedingly heavy road for a strong draft team. A good carriage team required much more to pull the carriage faster than a walk.

The road was completed and the roadbed was well formed where dirt filled the holes and the road was used. The road was a depth of about four and one-half inches and was sufficiently firm to allow rolling. A smooth roller, with a narrow disk, a disk set, was run before the oil spreading tank to open small furrows, and a few followed that sprinkling tank thoroughly mix the soil and oil and the oil.

The oiling was done the first days of October. The oil was not heated. The tank of 500 gallons would cover about 100 square yards once. The harrow followed each application. When one gallon of oil was applied, the road was used. The road seemed nearly saturated to the depth of the plowing, four and one-half inches. An area of about 1,000,000 square yards was oiled. The cost of oiling, per square yard was slightly more than 1 cent, representing the oil labor and supplies. The oil soaked dust. Had the same area been sprinkled with water to prevent dust the cost would have been 24 cents per square yard. Mr. Dunn estimated that the cost of sprinkling the area oiled last summer would have been $107,232. The expense of oiling the area was $10,724. The direct saving in using oil was $5,538.88, or 54 per cent. The indirect benefit followed in a marked saving in the cost of the government's agricultural colleges in the United States to realize the vital concern which good roads are to farmers. Not only was there the saving of poor roads following rain, but there was the every day feature of rural potholes and poor roads generally.

The college board of regents named Albert Dickens to take charge of experimental road work in Kansas. Mr. Dickens selected one-fourth of a mile of road west of the reformatory at Hutchinson to be in the first experiment. He reported upon the test as follows:

"The soil was a fair sample of the sandy loam of the Arkansas valley. At the date of its selection no rain had fallen for some time. The soil was several inches deep. Loads consisting of fifty bushels of grain

Dr. Vicente Santoni of the Medical Faculty, Paris,

Now Practicing in Ponce, Porto Rico, Says:

The undersigned, Dr. Vicente Santoni, of the Medical Faculty of Paris, practicing in Ponce, Porto Rico, certifies:

"I have been using the preparation known as Peruna for some time, for catarrhal diseases, always obtaining excellent results. It is a good preparation and I will always use it in cases for which it is adapted."

Dr. V. Santoni,
Ponce, P. R.

Peruna in Hot Countries.

In some countries the atmosphere is a natural tonic. Low temperature, high altitude, with an atmosphere rich in oxygen, are invigorating to the people. Such people are vigorous of body, quick in action, and enterprising. Other countries are not so fortunate. High temperature, low altitude, little oxygen, and the atmosphere naturally depressing. Tonic become almost a necessity of the everyday life. A scientific tonic in a large degree mitigates the untoward effect of a depressing climate. A great many years ago Dr. Hartman devised Peruna. Its manufacture has been under his watchful care ever since. To make of it a reliable and safe tonic which could be taken any length of time without producing a drug habit has been the ambition of Dr. Hartman. That he has succeeded in bringing Peruna up to this high ideal is apparent by the world-wide reputation which it has attained. Peruna is a tonic which is applicable in all depressing states of the system. It may be used by those recovering from acute ailments, or those who are debilitated by climatic influences.

Testimonial of Dr. Esteban Vidal y Rios, of Ponce, Porto Rico. Doctor of Medicine and Surgery of the University of Madrid, honorary member of the Faculty of Barcelona, Catalina, Spain. Has practiced in the hospitals of Paris and has been admitted to the bar of Porto Rico. "I certify that I prescribe Peruna, a remedy for pulmonary diseases, manufactured by the Peruna Drug Co., of Columbus, Ohio, U. S. A., and that I have been surprised by the quick, sure results and its good pharmacological formula." E. VIDAL Y RIOS, Ponce, P. R.

The Price Of Wheat.

It has never been possible for speculators to affect for a long time the price of any commodity of general production and consumption. The excitement in the wheat-market a few weeks ago, accompanied as it was by a rise in the price and also by a fall, is no exception to the general rule.

In the long run, the price of any article is governed by the amount of it in the market and by the demand for it. This simple elementary law of economics applies universally. It applies when two millionaires bid against each other for the possession of a painting. The man who is willing to pay the most gets it. As to wheat, when the price gets beyond the ability of the poor to pay, they buy corn or something else, and live on that. Yet of course there is temporary artificial tampering with prices in an effort to get a "corner" on the crop. No one defends the practice.

The wheat situation, however, deserves serious attention of the country, for unless there is an increase of production, the price will be permanently higher than it is now. In 1880, less than thirty years ago, the United States produced ten bushels of wheat for every person in the country. Last year it produced only seven and a half bushels. Production is not keeping pace with population. The amount available for export is falling off rapidly at the same time that the demand from abroad is becoming more urgent.

There is only one possible result, and that is an increase in the price. This undesirable outcome may be prevented only by planting more acres of wheat, or by making those acres already devoted to the crop yield more.

The Secretary of Agriculture has frequently called attention to the failure of farming to keep pace with the expansion of population, and to the prospect of an increase in the prosperity of the farmers through high prices for their crops so long as this condition prevails.—Youth's Companion.

J. C. W. Beckham.

In the turmoil of fractional politics, former Governor Beckham has come in for his full share of contumely, deserved or not, as foe or friend may judge; but since he has entered the editorial field, promising to content himself with observation and comment, our mind recurs to a nation that may be prevented, him, stripped of all the soil of politics. Ben James, an eminent lawyer, has been ill for several weeks. He is better. Mrs. Isaac Shaw is ill. Jas. Harris and family, of Whitesville, spent Saturday and Sunday with Jerry Basham.

yer, and one of the attorneys for the United States in settling the Spanish war claims at the Paris conference, made this comment on J. C. W. Beckham: "I taught that boy in school and I predicted a great future for him. He was the quickest, most persistent and most highly principled youth I ever met. He had no apparent faults in school, and no bad habits."—Paducah Sun.
